THE SALES SUCCESS RESOURCE CENTER

Dear Barry,

Welcome to the March edition of our newsletter. This month's feature article about effective elevator speeches was written by a friend and colleague of mine, Eric Albertson. He's got a website and a newsletter of his own that is very good. If you like what you read in this article, I urge you to subscribe to Eric's as well. I learn something every month from Eric.

The Richardson Chamber of Commerce Small Business Roundtable Committee is also hosting its monthly breakfast on the same topic this month. (See left panel for details.)

Enjoy, and as always, good selling...Barry

Someone is Stealing from You

Building Powerful Elevator Speeches

Eric Albertson

How well is your business growing through referrals and word-of-mouth? How well do you describe who you are in such a way that people are easily able to remember it, and pass it along when appropriate. Eric Albertson will not only give you a formula to use to build an effective elevator speech, but he'll also show you how not having one is robbing you of money.

This month's article is by the author of Elevator Speech, a great little E-book that should be on your bookshelf.

Effective Communication Formula

Did you know that research has shown that how well we communicate is broken down as follows:

- 55% through non-verbal ways - body language, eye contact and facial expressions
- 38% through tonality - how you say it
- 7% through content - what you say

Are you concentrating too much on what you say? Why don't you video tape yourself doing a sales call role play or a presentation to determine how you can improve your performance in areas you hadn't thought about for a while?
